

In this issue

Case Report

Open Access Case Report PTZAID:OJT-6-139

Diencephalic storm in trauma patients: Is it really that rare

Published On: April 23, 2022 | Pages: 001 - 002

Author(s): Andrew C Bright, Celia Y Quang, Scott G Blair, Nathan M Polite, Kaitlin M Alexander, Andrew Haiflich, C Caleb Butts, Yann-leei L Lee, Christopher M Kinnard, Maryann I Mbaka, Ashley Y Williams and Jon D Simmons*

Introduction: Diencephalic storm is characterized by extreme episodic catecholamine release in the presence of a stressor and it is usually refractory to standard antihypertensives. The treatment of choice during the crisis is propofol and the best preventative measure is to remove the stressor (i.e. ventilator). Case presentation: A 32-year-old male sustained 2nd a ...

Abstract View Full Article View DOI: 10.17352/ojt.000039